More information on discipline.....

PRE-SCHOOL: An important piece of information for parents to possess regarding disciplining children under the age of 7 is that they do not have the ability for inner speech. Therefore, we need to be careful of what we expect from them. They are not able to think before they act or speak, that ability does not develop until closer to the age of eight. It also sheds a new light on the punishment technique of "time out." Can a child this young sit and think about what they have just done wrong? The answer is no. The age appropriate alternative is "time in". Time in is a technique where the child is brought to the adult rather than separated from them. During their time in children are allowed to process their behavior and expectations are clearly laid out for them. With time outs where the child builds resentment and no processing is done, the behavior is likely to repeat itself.

SCHOOL AGE: Children 6-12 need information, not lectures. Let's face it, after the first couple of sentences they are unable to process all that talk. Use short, kind, information-packed directives to tell the child what you do want done. Instead of expending a great deal of breath lecturing them about what you did not want done and punishing them for their action, tell them what you do expect. Pro-actively laying down an expectation is more likely to gain you the behavior you do want, lower your stress level and increase your child's self-esteem.

TEENAGERS: In disciplining teenagers, the critical element is respect for their maturing ability to make decisions. It is tough to let go of our children, however, the teenage years are about slowly guiding your child into becoming a responsible, independent young adult. Trying to control their every move will stifle their ability to build responsibility and raise your stress level. Two helpful hints are to pick your battles and then be consistent. Pick your battles means to really give the issue some thought and allow them the freedom to explore new ideas within reasonable limits. Be consistent means when you set a limit, be firm, calm and fair is enforcing that limit. What teens need most is to know that we trust them to start making more independent decisions as they mature, but at the same time we set age appropriate limits. It is striking that balance between trust and limits that parents of teens can find their greatest challenge.

Ruth Fett, a counselor who specializes in helping parents, will be speaking to the parents of Sacred Heart Catholic School on Tuesday, October 7 starting at 7:00pm. All families are welcome to attend.

Sacred Heart Catholic School, your parish school, is accredited by Wisconsin Religious and Independent School Accreditation. We meet the highest standards to assure our students the highest quality education.

Sacred Heart Religious Education

Hello everyone!

I am incredibly grateful to those of you who have volunteered to be catechists this year. I cannot thank you enough for your commitment to the education of our young people, and I am sure that is a sign of the wonderful year we are going to have.

That being said, right now, I still need 1 more high school teacher! The class that needs a teacher is Jesus-Miracles and Parables, which is for freshmen and will be offered in November and April. If you are available to teach this class, please inform me as soon as possible. You would be teaching 6 classes total, 3 in fall and 3 in spring, and those classes would be on Wednesday nights from 6:30-8:30pm. This is a doable time commitment! I promise if you volunteer, I won't let you be overwhelmed. Please consider this opportunity.

On the elementary level, I would like additional catechists for 2nd, 3rd, and 4th grade. Each of those grades has one catechist currently, but the year would be even smoother if they each had two. I am also looking for high school volunteers to assist with all elementary grades. There will be a Sacred Heart teacher sitting in on each grade's RE class as a mentor, so if you volunteered to be an additional catechist, you would be well-supported!

Also, everyone keep thinking about RCIA, and remember that it does not have to lead to conversion. Going through the process can be just a way to learn more about Catholicism and Christianity in general. If you have a non-Catholic spouse or other friend or family member who is curious about your beliefs and traditions, encourage them to think about signing up! And, as always, if you know someone who is interested let me know.
